Migration, Immigration and Culture: Implications for language education

Conference Theme

Migration is an ancient phenomenon – remember thousands and thousands of people fleeing from war, hunger and oppression in search of peace, better living conditions and freedom; taking with them their religious beliefs and eating habits, their culture and words.

Children and young people in the classroom often only understand half of what they are hearing; adults who are confronted with another culture, often with no or just some years of schooling, need basic language skills to find jobs. Companies with migrant or refugee workers need training in how to successfully integrate them into the team.

Call for papers

This creates a lot of challenges for language teachers.

What is your experience in teaching migrants? What recommendations can you give?

Let us share your success and learn from the challenges that you have faced.

Please put forward proposals for a Presentation (30 minutes) or an interactive Workshop (90 minutes). We welcome TEDX style talks and PECHA KUCHA group presentations.

Please send us a title and abstract* (max. 300 words) by Wednesday, 22nd November 2017.
